Together we will beat cancer

Although we can't organise any events at the moment, with the vaccine rollout there is hope that we will be able to at some time later in the year and be assured that as soon as we can, we will do so. We've missed you!

It was lovely to see so many of you at Dr Sterling's online guided tour of the Queen's House and our thanks to him for a very enjoyable evening. Now we just need to be able to go there in person.

As you know, all charities are suffering from tremendous loss of income and every penny helps, so thank you to those of you who have sent us donations. So far this year, we have been sent £3,900, much in memory of a loved one, some from sponsored events such as a school 'Own Clothes Day', 8 sponsored walks with a carer, walking a fantastic total of 45 miles, some from donated items sold on eBay, plus, of course, much sent just to support us. Here at Cancer Research UK, we are very grateful. Here's our PayPal link which allows us to receive donations free from of any charges. ### Cancer Research UK online shop

Thank you to everyone who bought from the Cancer Research UK shop. As a group we raised £561.31 together and were in the top 5 groups in the country. Amazing! I hope that those of you who bought from the Cancer Research UK online shop were as delighted with your purchases as I was, you can buy your World Cancer Day unity Bands there and there are still some clearance Christmas cards and gifts. Visit the online shop to browse and bag a bargain.

JUMPING IN PUDDLES FOR CANCER

Have you seen this latest campaign? 'Jumping in Puddles' is bound to bring a little joy to these gloomy January days, and something you can do with the whole family!

The ask is simple - round up your household, get your wellies on and jump in a puddle for Cancer Research UK. Then, upload your picture to social media using #JumpInForCancer, tag 3 friends to do it too and be sure to donate to the fundraising page here - and we can certainly find enough puddles at the moment! Together we will beat cancer.

Stay safe and keep well.

All on the Greenwich & District Local Cancer Research UK Committee.
